ATTLING NELSON has done little rough boxing. He has given his sparring partners an easy time. He has trained altogether for speed, endurance and skill. He knows that he can do the hard punching when the time cones, and he basn't tried to improve his hitting powers. Nelson has been sprinting and dancing about. While boxing he has tried to outpoint his partners, while encouraging them to "be clever." He knows that Britt's lead has been along the lines of skilful boxing and he wants to turn the tables on foxy Jimmy. At the same time Nelson isn't running away with the idea that he can win this fight by boxing. He is going in for a knockout. To a World correspondent who asked him why he was plied "Because I want to be fast enough to catch this Britt sprinter before the

By changing the starting hour from By changing the starting hour from 3 P. M. to 2 the promoters have given Nelson a longer lease of daylight. Down in Colma, you know, there is nothing to prevent the ordering of extra rounds by the referee in case of dant. The requirements of the law are simply "a limited-round contest." Five or ten extra rounds would make no difference at all. However, there has been no talk of all. However, there has been no talk o such a feature in this fight. The Frisco sporting men think forty-five rounds chough to insure a finish.

Between Rounds

BY JOHN POLLOCK.

Tommy Burns, the Western middle weight, who recently knocked out Dave Barry, of California, has another match on his hands. He has been signed by Matchmaker McCarey, of the Pacific A. No Settlement Reached.

The conference broke up at 1 o'clock without a settlement being reached. Noian absolutely refused to come off his horse, and Britt would not give in the fight a standing in the eves of those who are constantly figuring that it is a frame-up and removed whatever suspicion of crookedness was held by the public. Now the fear of a "job" is strong again.

It is figured that Nolan and Nelson with the idea of compelling Brite to consent to a half and half division of the purse, are throwing all sorts of obstacles in the way of the night. It is said that Nolan feels that Britt, seeing the coin the fight would bring to his coffers slipping from him, will say "Solit the purse," rather than have it called off.
